++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cold and showery.

Today:
Mostly cloudy with frequent and often heavy showers. These will fall as rain, with hail in some heavier bursts but in between there may be some occasionally bright or sunny spells. Rather breezy and feeling cold. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Tonight:
Scattered showers will continue overnight, perhaps more frequent later on. Occasional clear spells are possible too allowing frost and ice to form. Remaining rather breezy and cold. Minimum temperature 1 deg C (34 deg F).

Monday:
A mixture of sunny spells and scattered showers on Monday, these mostly across Kent, but occasionally drifting inland on a steady easterly breeze. Another cold day for all. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Staying cold with sunny periods and occasional showers on Tuesday and Wednesday. Perhaps mostly dry and bright on Thursday. Sharp frosts overnight and a risk of ice.
